The Daily Press.

HONGKONG, AUGUST 18th, 1877.

It is very evident that the native pickpockets in this Colony are growing bold. Only a few days back a Chinaman snatched a watch and chain from the captain of a merchant steamer whilst he was taking a solitary walk along Garden Road, while on Thursday a still more impudent robbery was perpetrated on the captain of the steamer Leyte in the public street. The thief in the latter case snatched a pocket-book containing more than a thousand dollars from the pocket of Captain ZENAGUIRE as he was getting into a chair to go to make a business call. The captain sprang from the chair and pursued the thief, never losing sight of him until he was captured. On the way, however, the thief succeeded in passing on the pocket-book to a confederate, and this fellow was also ultimately arrested, and all the money except about twenty dollars recovered. These incidents are enough to suggest that captains of merchantmen carry money about with them, and they probably have means of finding out who it will pay best to rob. The two above-mentioned cases, following so quickly one on the other, and other similar ones that have occurred lately, serve to show that the goal has lost much of its terror for evildoers. The punishment of flogging—the grand deterrent amongst a criminal population to whom imprisonment is no hardship—having apparently been suspended by His Excellency the Governor, the more daring spirits will now be sure to strike at higher game. There is practically little check upon these characters save by corporal punishment, which they really dread, and that being removed they are unrestrained by fear of mere labour. It must be borne in mind that numbers of the criminals who make Hong Kong their hunting-ground are either desperadoes who have made over Kwangtung wretchedly ruled as it is—too hot to hold them, or else are members of brotherhoods having their headquarters at Canton, who make thieving a business and possess all sorts of facilities for the rapid disposal of stolen property. It has always been the policy of the Government here hitherto to show the honest and industrious portion of the population that it is able to afford them that protection for life and property which the Chinese Authorities so utterly fail to give, and to convince offenders against the law that British justice has long-reaching arms. In order to carry this out it has been found necessary to deal rigorously with criminals. Flogging, which has been found essential to put down gauding in the United Kingdom, has been called into requisition here, and with the best results. If, however, the fear of the lash be removed, the results may easily be predicted. Crime will increase, more especially pocket-picking and highway robbery with violence, the latter of which was once extremely prevalent and was only reduced by the severe and exemplary punishment of the culprits. The victims will more frequently be foreigners. The risk of attacking them may be greater, possibly, but the booty to be looked for is also considerably larger. Valuable watches and chains are worn by most European and American residents, and the Chinese thieves are perfectly well aware of the fact. Unfortunately these acts of robbery are sometimes accompanied by murder. The robber, stealthily gliding on his bare feet behind his unsuspecting victim, cares little whether the blow from his heavy bamboo kills or simply stuns so long as he can make good his escape. This being the case it is of vital importance to the British and foreign residents that they should be adequately protected against such attacks. Insecurity in the goal has no terrors for Chinese criminals; there are a good many who would almost as soon be in prison as at liberty, but those men tremble when they see the lash. Those who have had any experience in the Colony are well aware how impossible it is to produce any effect upon the Chinese criminal without the aid of corporal punishment. Nor is it predictable to undertake the reform of Chinese prisoners, except perhaps in the cases of juveniles. The Goal Committee in their report published in March last place this fact in a very clear light. They say: "Owing to the peculiar circumstances of this Colony, and the fact that by far the larger proportion of the criminals confined in the goal are Chinese, whose language is but little known to those who have charge of them, whose character and dispositions are imperfectly understood, and of whose previous history and lives it is almost impossible to obtain any knowledge, any attempt to cultivate their higher faculties and to improve their moral condition seems hopeless." The goal must be made as distasteful as possible to prisoners, and punishment must be deterrent to crime. It may readily be admitted that flogging is not a pleasant spectacle, and that it is a very painful mode of punishment. But it is an effectual preventive to crime in many cases, and compassion for brutal ruffians who have no mercy on their victims is ill bestowed indeed. The interests of the community are apt to be lost sight of when legislators begin to expand their pity upon those whose vices and crimes have brought them within the grasp of the law.

He kicked against something, and remarked, "What's that?" and looking down saw it was a pocket-book, and picked it up and walked away, having placed it in his pocket.
